Darryl's life

Darryl C. Duncan, so affectionately known as, "Ummmps or Mr. Omar," was born on June 6th, 1972, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, to Darryl C. Duncan Sr., and Ms. Terrance J. Jones. Umar, peacefully entered into eternal rest on May 20, 2021, surrounded by his loving family members. He is preceded in death by his father "Tariq" Duncan. Five days later, his grandmother Katie Bell Duncan, preceded him.

Darryl's expression of life was to live life to the fullest, as long as family and true friends are involved. It continued from Philly, to the small town of Union City, California. Umar attended public school here. He played t-ball, basketball for Saint Anne's, Pop Warner football and finally realized he had a knack for "music." This was way after the cast came off. Full of life, his smile would fill up a room with kindness, and change your mood to happiness. Ummmps, would never let you down, give you his last, last, last. It may be news to you, he definitely was the Original Jack of All Trades. Umar, knew "music," all in videos, knew "cars," from his training at Wyotech, could show you how to put out a fire safely, understood "elegant flowers, fancy table settings and immaculate chairs," he also loved being by the water...where he sometimes went fishing. Darryl wanted you to know, he was a family man, "YOU ALREADY KNOW...OFF-TOP." He took care of his family in any and every way he knew how. Umar uplifted them with his charm, wit, sense of security and the unconditional love he expressed towards them. Ummmps' proudest moments hit instantly, as he witnessed his adult children pave their own path, and the precise moment he became "Poppa!" That kind of love "glowed" whenever he was in their presence. His peace was so obvious around them. His eagerness to make them smile, so natural.

Darryl leaves, to cherish his memories and proudly remember his legacy of love for family, are his "Ummie," Terrance Jones; favorite and only sister, Jamila Williams (Ken Williams), two Man Omar it's Auntie Sue. I can't believe you're gone this breaks my heart. You are always such a part of our family Mom and Dad loved you so much and Alan oh my gosh he can't even speak your name now without bursting into tears. Sandy called you her other son LOL and when you would call her mom's in public and people would look at the two of you she always said how funny it was and how you guys would laugh about it and she would say yeah that's my son too. You earned your wings and you left behind your legacy with your beautiful children and grandchildren. Rest in peace Omar. You are now a beautiful angel flying high and a guardian angel to your children and grandchildren. Rest in peace sweet angel.
